

We visited several farmer markets.

The Government markets were well organized and less expensive, but the produce quality was not as high as the private markets.

The State market.

An interesting way to transport your eggs home.

Havana city market in Vedado.

It was a covered market with high quality produce.

Robbie, Gabriello and Mark at the market.

There was a diversity of fruits and vegetables.

It is always fun to see the balances used to weigh produce.

Other local activities can also be seen at the market.

Occasionally, there were street entrepreneurs with produce.

There were also government stores that provided rationed food like rice (Arroz), beans (Frijole), sugar (Azucar) and coffee (Café).
