Oxford Botanic Garden

Oxford Botanic Garden is a classic style European University garden with beds arranged by plant family.

There were a set of small conservatories with interesting plants like Bauhinia glauca that is a tropical vine in the legume family that produces wonderful flowers and tendrils.

Elephant's foot
Dioscorea elephantipes.

In the conservatory, it had a favorite plant - Streptocarpus cooperii that produces only a single leaf for its entire life cycle.

The botanic garden is bordered by the Cherwell River with Punting.
