

Kentucky Restaurant Rewards Program

Program Overview

The Kentucky Department of Agriculture (KDA) is providing an incentive to local restaurants to purchase eligible Kentucky Proud products. The Kentucky Restaurant Rewards Program reimburses participating restaurants and caterers with up to 20 percent of the purchase cost of qualifying products.

This program benefits growers by opening up additional local marketing opportunities. It is a way for farmers with competitively priced products to enter the restaurant market. In turn, the Restaurant Rewards Program helps compensate participating restaurants for the higher costs that can be incurred in buying local products, thus enabling them to maintain their usual food costs. Additionally, the restaurants benefit from being able to incorporate fresh, locally grown products into their menu items. This program is also a means of promoting KY Proud products to consumers.

Any foodservice, with the exception of those that are part of a retail store, may participate in this program. Kentucky's state resort park restaurants and other state-operated foodservices may also take part in the Restaurant Rewards Program. The restaurant is required to sign an agreement with the KDA and to promote the Kentucky Proud brand. Participants will also be subject to an audit by the KDA. The reimbursement maximum is $12,000 over a 12-month period (until funds are exhausted).

Growers interested in marketing to state-run foodservices should contact the appropriate park or cafeteria business office to complete the necessary paperwork connected with the program. Each foodservice makes its own purchases, usually at the request of the chef. The actual purchasing agent may either be the business manager or the chef. Purchase prices are based on the monthly price list sent to each restaurant/cafeteria by the State Parks Department. Producers can obtain this pricing information by contacting the purchasing agent for the individual park.

Eligible products include Kentucky-grown and/or -raised fruits, vegetables, meat, fish, dairy products, and eggs. Value-added items also qualify if at least 90 percent of the product ingredients were grown or produced in Kentucky. All products must be purchased from a Kentucky Proud member and conform to the KDA eligibility guidelines. Growers who follow Good Agricultural Practices (GAP) and have obtained the KDA GAP certificate will have a marketing advantage. Post-harvest handling and packaging will be important considerations in selling to restaurants.

Growers and foodservice businesses interested in any aspect of the Kentucky Restaurant Rewards Program should contact the KDA regarding eligibility requirements and for more program details.

Producers located near a state resort park or state restaurant may want to take advantage of this marketing opportunity. The following contact information may prove useful to these growers. This listing was current as of May 20, 2009.
