Broken bones, worst injuries in Crittenden

At least 16 deaths have been reported in Kentucky due to last week's storm and an additional 85 people were hospitalized from this storm from these numbers since more than 50. So far, Crittenden County officials say no one was killed in the county.

Robert Curnall, director of nursing at Crittenden Health System said Monday that there have been no deaths from injuries not related to the storm. She said the most serious injuries here have resulted in broken bones.

Kentucky National Guard4

employees Thursday a thorough check of every building in Crittenden County. Their welfare checks include the most rural areas where power was out, carrying some light supplies and water for the residents.

Blue lights draw attention to help officers law enforcement officers are carrying more “blue lights” while patrolling areas of the county whose power is still out.

The sheriff said Monday that operating the blue lights does two things by making them more conspicuous in neighborhoods.

“First, the sight of the blue lights will be sending notices for disaster in the county. The soldiers of the National Guard are bringing in portable generators to help those residents in the county. Their welfare checks include the most rural areas where power was out, carrying some light supplies and water for the residents.

Scene around town
Not all scenarios from last week’s ice storm were awful. (Clockwise from center: A VIBRANTLY-COLORED male cardinal perches on an ice-covered limb last week in Marion as he looks for food. An ODD scene, ice formed along the sewing machine in Connie Wallace’s shop. Ice has been on the minds of some Marionans for days, such as the time Wallace took a break from carrying pond water to her house in order to flush toilets to make a deposit at the bank, which was limiting the number of customers to 10 to ensure order with military police standing guard. A DOWNED utility pole and street light at the corner of Club Drive and Old Shady Grove Road blocked passage down the lane to the fairgrounds. Several poles in that area snapped by the weight of ice-covered power lines. JORDAN MCCABE, a former Marion County green space administrator, met with a group of community members to discuss what he has seen around town last Wednesday while riding his bike almost effortlessly around the city’s icy streets.)

County residents struggle with prolonged power outage caused by dangerous coating of ice and snow grinding every-day life to a halt

Atmos offers natural gas safety in wake of storm

Pam Hunt, Crittenden County Extension Agent for Family and Consumer Scienties, said the county Extension Office is seemong many calls about burners and分布式 devices. Hunt said the information is from Maine’s cooperative extension service.

“They have more experience in the situations we are facing in Crittenden County and the surrounding areas,” Hunt said.

A bed-water order remains in effect for Crittenden County residents who utilize Crittenden, Ceguyno Water District. Unless you are absolutely certain your water supply is not contaminated, pour all water before using it in the following: preparing food, brushing teeth, or washing dishes. If the water is contaminated, boil the water, allowing it to cool, then store it in a sterilized container.

W ater heater: Your hot water heater or water pressure tank could supply many gallons of saturated water during an emergency. If you suspect a natural gas leak, you may need to turn off the gas heater, switch off the gas or electricity, then flush the hot water. Leaving the power on while the hot water is supplied may cause an explosion or burn out the elements. After turning off the power source, open the cold water valve at the bottom of the tank. Do not turn the water heater on again until the water system is back in service.

Trash disposal options

In the early hours of the morning on Thursday, the Food Mart was one of the only stores in town open to the public although the storm was dark and deadly. Eventually, the sheriff ordered a backup power to operate the fuel pumps. Five Star closed and did not reopen until early this week, but fuel can’t be pumped until power is back.

County Debris Drop Site

The City of Marion will be collecting yard waste and brush debris with fuel oil, paint or paper materials, veldelabie, used oil, construction and demolition debris at the City of Marion Recycling Landfill. The site is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Debris dropoff at the site for brush, leaf, yard waste, tarps, corrugated metal, and cardboard is free of charge. Additional information on how to handle items can be obtained at the City of Marion Recycling Landfill.

The cost for disposal as follows:

- $2 for one single bag
- $5 for one-axle dump truck, full load
- $10 for one-axle dump truck, half load
- $15 for standard trailer
- $25 for two-axle dump trucks, full load
- $30 for two-axle dump trucks, half load
- $45 for small truck, full load
- $55 for full-size truck, full load
- $65 for full-size truck, half load
- $50 for trailer with sideboards

For more information, contact Crittenden County’s Recycling Landfill office at 965-5236.

In Madisonville and Sharon, County offices urge residents to pick up your own brush and debris and to get rid of the contractor’s liability insurance. Burning debris on your own property is in accordance with state laws. Because of illegal fire hazards, burning within 150 feet of any structure or road is not acceptable. County offices encourage residents to call Crittenden County’s Recycling Landfill office at 965-5236 for instructions.

Lois said she expects the work to keep him employed for several weeks. But the drive to get the work done is just to keep things rolling.

Storm Refugees

Storm refugees poured into Tennessee by the thousands early last week, creating traffic jams, long lines and leaving grocery and department store shelves bare. This photo was taken of the bumper-to-bumper traffic exiting Kentucky and entering Paducah, Tenn., on Thursday evening.
