With over 3 million volumes across 14 campus libraries and information centers, the University of Kentucky Libraries contain an extensive collection of resources to support the University's programs of study, research, and service to the Commonwealth.

The University Libraries provide a variety of electronic information sources, including an online catalog of library collections, over 300 databases, and more than 25,000 e-journals in all subject areas. The William T. Young Library provides the largest on-campus concentration of computers and study rooms available to faculty, staff, and students.

The University Libraries possess significant print collections of rare books, manuscripts, and audio-visual archives. Unique collections include Kentuckiana, oral history, modern political papers, and a comprehensive collection of Kentucky newspapers. The UK Libraries is proud to be one of only six institutions in the United States to be chosen by the National Endowment for the Humanities to participate in the National Digital Newspaper Program. Some images from the project can be seen at: www.uky.edu/Libraries/NDNP.

The Libraries' expert staff help locate resources, provide instruction, and work closely with faculty and graduate students to support their research needs. The Libraries offer instruction to individuals, introductory orientation to the library for beginning students, and in-depth presentations to classes of advanced students.
