Rationale:

The event that prompted the Arts Administration Program to reexamine its curriculum was the receipt of funds for a new, endowed faculty position. With new faculty, the program is able to expand its Arts Administration-specific course offerings, and provide students with a more thorough education in the discipline.

Besides expanding course offerings, the new curriculum allows students more opportunity to pursue their individual interests. More often in the new curriculum, students are allowed to choose from a wider variety of courses, rather than being required to take a specific course. This philosophy is appropriate for two reasons. First, the major is by nature flexible, drawing its curriculum from many different departments and schools. Secondly, the students will go into many different types of positions once they graduate. Some positions will call for higher levels of business skills, while others will call for more arts discipline skills. The new curriculum provides the students with a base of knowledge, but also allows them to discover their own interests and pursue them more intensely.

There was also an interest in making the curriculum easier to understand, and more efficient for the students to move through. In the old curriculum, students with a music emphasis had to take approximately 136 credit to complete the major, a full semester's worth of credits above the minimum 120 credit requirement. By trimming some arts discipline requirements, making elective requirements more flexible, and carefully choosing University Studies classes, the new curriculum allows every student in the program to complete their major in eight semesters, taking no more than 16 credits per semester.

Reasons for some of the specific curriculum requirements are outlined below:

- In Communications Requirements, adding TA 225 Vocal Production for the Stage I to COM 181 Basic Public Speaking, and COM 287 Persuasive Speaking as a recommended course when students are fulfilling Universities Studies requirements. The program's interest is that its students get as much practice as possible making presentations to others. TA 225 meets this requirement, as well as COM 181 and 287.
- In Humanities Requirements, recommending students take the two history courses in their primary arts discipline: A-H 105 Ancient and Medieval Art and A - H 106 Renaissance Through Modern Art, or TA 380 History of Theatre I and TA 381 History of Theatre II, or MUS 201 Music in Western Culture to 1700 and MUS 202 Music in Western Culture 1700 - Present. Taking arts related courses are the most appropriate choices for students majoring in Arts Administration.
- In Cross-Disciplinary Requirements, recommending students choose courses from A-H 105 Ancient and Medieval Art, A - H 106 Renaissance Through Modern Art, TA 380 History of Theatre I, TA 381 History of Theatre II, MUS 201 Music in Western Culture to 1700, MUS 202 Music in Western Culture 1700 - Present. This recommendation encourages students to meet their Cross-Disciplinary requirement by taking arts-related classes, which is preferred for students who are majoring in Arts Administration.
- Dropping ENG 203 Business Writing, or ISC 126 Strategic Planning and Writing, or ENG 205 Intermediate Writing as a premajor requirement, and replacing them with AAD 200 Arts Administration Communications: AAD 200 Arts Administration Communications will accomplish the same objectives of ENG 203, ENG 205 and ISC 126, in that it will be a writing intensive course. It will, however, concentrate on writing styles that Arts Administrators must master, and will also include some development of oral presentation skills. This new course will also provide the students with a very active and creative introduction to the Arts Administration discipline.

- Dropping CS 101 Introduction to Computing as a premajor requirement and replacing it with AAD 202 Arts Administration Technologies and computer training segments in other courses. AAD 202 will allow students to be trained in several computer applications that are commonly used in the Arts Administration field, but are not covered in CS 101.
- Requiring that AAD 101 Arts Administration Professions be taken four semesters. The Program's effectiveness would be greatly improved if the students networked more among themselves, if they became more aware of opportunities available to them while in school, if they better understood how to pursue internships and jobs, and if they were exposed to more professionals in the field. Faculty believes that these activities can be best accomplished by requiring students to attend the professions course four semesters during their education, as opposed to the one time in the old curriculum.
- Dropping AAD 201 Introduction to Arts Administration The topics covered in AAD 201 are being covered more extensively in two new courses: AAD 200 Arts Administration Communications and AAD 340 Arts Management Issues.
- Replacing AAD 330 Managing Arts Organizations by two courses AAD 340 Arts Management and AAD 350 Financial Management of Arts Organizations. The topics in AAD 330 are being more extensively covered in two new courses: AAD 340 Arts Management Issues and AAD 350 Financial Management of Arts Organizations.
- Adding AAD 399 Arts Administration Practicum. This is a new course that will require students to complete two, one credit, on-campus arts administration service projects. One of the projects will have to be in service to the department or school of the student's arts discipline. Examples of projects might include conducting a publicity campaign for an event, organizing an exhibition or event, updating a web site, working on a fundraiser, etc. Besides helping the students gain more real-world Arts Administration experiences, the course will help instill within the students a stronger service ethic.
- Students will be required to take one AAD 402 Special Topics class as part of their major requirements. This new requirement is another example of the Program having the available funds to offer more Arts Administration specific courses. In this case, the program will have enough resources to offer at least one Topics course per year taught by either a regular, full-time faculty member or a part-time instructor.
- Changing AAD 499 Internship in Arts Administration from a course in which students receive a letter grade to a pass/fail. The great majority of the internships carried out by students in the program take place during summers, far away from Lexington in places such as New York, Los Angeles and increasingly overseas. Unfortunately, because of a lack of resources, faculty are unable to travel to out-of-state internship sites and interact with the students and their on-site supervisors. Consequently, faculty evaluates the internships through secondary materials such as student and on-site supervisor evaluations, work samples, pictures, time sheets, end papers and final interviews. Given these limitations, drawing distinctions between what is, for an example, an A internship and a B internship is very difficult. Therefore, Pass/Fail seems to be a more appropriate grading option.
- Combining Arts Discipline Core and Primary Requirements into Arts Related Requirements. This adjustment makes it easier to see the arts related requirements of the program.

- In Art Studio, allowing the students to take any two A-S level courses instead of specifying A-S 340 Graphic Design I and A-S 380 Photography I. Many of the topics in A-S 340 and A-S 380 will be covered in the two new Arts Technologies classes. Therefore, in the new curriculum students will be free to explore other studio courses that interest them.
- In the Art Concentration/Studio Track, drop one A-H 300 level or above Art History Course. This action is being taken to make the number of credits required in the Art Studio discipline comparable to those in the other arts discipline tracks.
- In Art History, making the requirements more in line with the new curriculum in the Art History Program. The Art History Program rewrote its curriculum within the last couple of years. The requirements in the new Art History curriculum reflect those changes.
- In Music, adding a Music History Discipline Track. For those students who declared Music as their major discipline emphasis, the current curriculum is very performance oriented. Besides taking music history and theory classes, students also have to take a significant number of private lessons and perform in ensembles, as well. However, most Arts Administrators rarely perform. They must know how the art in their discipline is created, and have a strong grasp of their discipline's history, but they need not be performers. Therefore, a new discipline emphasis in Music was created in the area of Music History. A similar change was made during the last Arts Administration curriculum revision when the Visual Art discipline was split into a Studio Art emphasis and an Art History emphasis, a change that has proven to be very successful over the last seven years. .
- In Music, allowing Music Performance students to take MUS 201 Music in Western Culture to 1700 and MUS 202 Music in Western Culture 1700 to Present as their music history survey courses. This change allows music performance students to meet both University Studies and major requirements, something that was not possible with the music survey courses required in the old curriculum.
- In Music, eliminating the four credits of MUC 150 - 153 class piano and reducing the number of MUP Vocal or Instrumental Lessons credits required from 12 to 8. Some credits needed to be cut from the Music Performance Track to bring it in line with the requirements of the other arts discipline tracks. Since most of the Arts Administration majors with a music emphasis do not plan to pursue performance careers, the decision was made to cut the credits out of performance related courses. Those students who do wish to continue performing after graduation generally double major in Arts Administration and Music.
- Eliminating the secondary arts discipline, and allowing students to take a broader range of courses through Directed Electives. These changes allow students more flexibility to pursue their own interests. Under the new curriculum, through directed electives, the students can explore a variety of art forms outside of their primary arts discipline, instead of a single art form. Additionally, they are free to take any AAD 402 Special Topics course, or any business-related course, as opposed to a handful of designated courses. With these changes, a students can pursue more extensive training in a specific business area such as marketing, or can complete the prerequisites that are necessary to get into an MBA Program with an Arts Administration emphasis.

Drop Courses

- AAD 201     Introduction to Arts Administration (3)
AAD 330     Managing Arts Organizations (3)

Rationale: Both courses above are being dropped because the Arts Administration Program has received an endowed professorship, allowing it to restructure its curriculum and offer more courses specifically related to the major. The topics covered in AAD 201 will be covered in AAD 200 and AAD 340 (both new courses proposed below). The topics covered in 330 will be covered in AAD 340 and AAD 350 (proposed below).

Course Changes:

- AAD 101     Arts Administration Professions (1)
(Change in description)

Change to:

- AAD 101     Arts Administration Professions (1)
The primary intent of this course is to make students aware of the opportunities open to them in the field of Arts Administration, and to network with other students in the program, faculty, program graduates and working arts administrators. Course activities will include program and announcements regarding the availability of grants and awards. Students will also become aware of employment and volunteer opportunities while they are in school, and how to pursue professional positions upon graduation. Pass/fail only. Majors are required to enroll a minimum of 4 semesters.

- AAD 310     Marketing the Arts (3)
(Change in description and prerequisite)

Change to:

- AAD 310     Marketing the Arts (3)
The course will examine methods used by arts organizations to sell admissions to their events and to sell other arts products. Emphasis is placed on marketing concepts related to product, price, placement and promotion.
Prereq: Completion of AAD 200, AAD 202 and one of the following: COM 181, COM 287, TA 225, or consent of the instructor.

- AAD 320     Fund Raising for the Arts (3)
(Change in prerequisite)

Change to:

- AAD 320     Fund Raising for the Arts (3)
Prereq: Completion of AAD 200, AAD 202 and one of the following: COM 181, COM 287, TA 225, or consent of the instructor.

- AAD 402     Topics in Arts Administration (Subtitle required) (1-3)

(Change in credits, description and prerequisite)

Change to:

AAD 402

Topics in Arts Administration (Subtitle required) (3)

A seminar which covers special topics in arts administration. May be repeated to a maximum of 12 credits when identified by different subtitles.

Prereq: Completion of AAD 200, AAD 202 and one of the following: COM 181, COM 287, TA 225, or consent of instructor.

AAD 499

Internship in Arts Administration (1-12)

(Change in description, prerequisite, grading option (pass/fail only))

Change to:

AAD 499

Internship in Arts Administration (1-12)

An internship with a university, community, state, regional or national arts organization, providing practical work experience related to arts administration. The internship is identified and conducted under the supervision of a faculty member.

Students must file a learning contract with the College of Fine Arts. May be repeated to a maximum of twelve credits. Pass/fail only.

Prereq: Completion of AAD 200, AAD 202 and one of the following: COM 181, COM 287, TA 225, or consent of instructor.

New Courses

AAD 200

Arts Administration Communications (3)

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the primary writing styles that they will be using throughout the remainder of their arts administration courses. For example, business letters, education and program guides, print and electronic advertisements, publicity materials, sales brochures, invitations and advocacy letters, all require mastering a different writing style. Additionally, students will learn how to make effective public presentations, based upon their writing assignments.

AAD 202

Arts Administration Technologies (3)

The purpose of this course is for students to gain the basic skills to design and produce materials utilized by arts organizations to communicate with their patrons. Additionally, the course will familiarize students with a number of design-related computer applications. Prereq: AAD 200 or consent of the instructor.

AAD 340

Arts Management Issues (3)

This course examines management issues facing arts organizations in the contemporary environment. Topics covered will include the role of artists and arts organizations in society, the differing motives behind nonprofit and for-profit corporations, freedom of expression and censorship, planning and leadership, intellectual property rights, issues related to race, class, sexuality and gender, plus other topics which may arise based on current events.

Prereq: Completion of AAD 200, AAD 202 and one of the following: COM 181, COM 287, TA 225, or consent of the instructor.

- AAD 350     Financial Management of Arts Organizations (3)
This course provides an overview of the financial management practices used primarily by nonprofit arts organizations. It begins by examining the process of contracting an artist and a facility, and then building a budget for the resulting arts event. It then examines how arts organizations establish, track, adjust and evaluate organizational budgets. Additionally it explores governmental financial and reporting requirements unique to nonprofit arts organizations, and the annual audit process.
Prereq: Completion of ACC 201, ACC 202, AAD 200, AAD 202 and one of the following: COM 181, COM 287, TA 225, or consent of the instructor.
- AAD 399     Arts Administration Practicum (1)
Under the supervision of a faculty member, students complete on-campus arts administration service projects. At least one of the two projects must be in service to the student's primary art discipline's department or school. Examples of projects might include conducting a publicity campaign for an event, working on a fundraiser, producing a publication, conducting research, updating a website, etc. Pass/fail option only. Learning contract required.
Prereq: Arts Administration major or consent of instructor.
- UK 100-001   University Course (Title to be assigned) (1-3)
Pass/fail only.
Prereq: Will be set by instructor.

At its meeting on April 15, the Senate Council approved a section of UK 100 to be offered as a P/F course. This request is for a one-time change in the current framework (UK 100 is currently offered for a letter grade). This initiative is designed as an experiment to evaluate the value of scheduling a Leadership course, developed by Elizabeth Hait from Student Affairs, within the traditional academic course offerings rather than as an Experiential Education course. Provost Kuder supports this request.
