Rhetoric is the study of written, oral, and digital communication. Rhetoric teaches you how to argue, persuade, inform, and express for a variety of professional and personal reasons. Rhetoric teaches you how to invent, organize, arrange, and produce knowledge. Rhetoric teaches you how to create and share meaning. Rhetoric is the basis of all writing we do. Web pages are rhetorical. Technical documents are rhetorical. Movies are rhetorical. Video games are rhetorical. Ads are rhetorical. Medical documents are rhetorical. Legal briefs are rhetorical. Rhetoric is everywhere we engage with ideas and content! WRD is dedicated to the study and teaching of writing practices, public rhetoric, and digital media. With 14 faculty and 2 staff members, we serve over 5,000 undergraduates each year. The WRD BA/BS major offers students three tracks:

- Professional Writing and Editing (for those who want careers in editing and publishing or writing for within a nonprofit or business)
- Rhetorical Theory and Practice (for those who want to get involved in public advocacy, government, or law)
- Digital Studies (for those who want to write and produce content for electronic spaces and understand how those spaces are designed).

WRD also offers a minor in Writing, Rhetoric and Digital Studies as well as a minor in Profession and Technical Writing.
