The National Student Exchange program (NSE) allows students to study at universities across the United States, Canada, Guam and Puerto Rico for a semester, academic year and, in some cases, a summer term.

Whether it’s exploring different areas in their field, investigating potential graduate programs or networking with faculty and professionals from new regions, each student pursues NSE for unique reasons. Nevertheless, every participant is able to grow academically, professionally and personally while earning academic credit towards their University of Kentucky degree.

Generally, placements are made through negotiations of the respective NSE coordinators, and 97 percent of applicants are placed at one of their chosen institutions.

NSE students pay normal UK tuition and fees. Room and board is paid to the host campus or independently arranged by the student. Visit uky.edu/us for more information.
