

HUMAN DEVELOPMENT INSTITUTE SEMINAR SERIES

Universal Design for Learning: Tools That Promote Excellence in Higher Education and Community Learning

Friday, February 15, 2013      1pm – 3pm E.T.
Conference Room 4, Mineral Industries Building – University of Kentucky and other statewide live videoconference sites

Presenter: Molly Boyle, MA, University of Massachusetts

Universal Design for Learning is a professional development concept that strives to make learning accessible to all students, no matter their individual backgrounds. This seminar will provide participants with a framework and skills to incorporate universal design for learning (UDL) strategies in a variety of settings. Attendees will gain an understanding of UDL concepts. This seminar will provide a basic tool kit of skills to use when approaching teaching and learning. Attendees will also be presented with examples of innovative uses of UDL elements from higher education and human services.

Molly Boyle is the Project Coordinator for the Equity and Excellence Project, Institute for Community Inclusion, at the University of Massachusetts. She provides professional development training and technical assistance to faculty, administrators, practitioners and pre-service students around Universal Design, effective teaching strategies for ensuring equal access for all students including those with disabilities.
