Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA):

In carrying out their assigned responsibilities, many offices at the University of Kentucky collect and maintain information about students. Although these records belong to the university, both university policy and federal law accord students a number of rights concerning these records.

The Federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, commonly known as FERPA, establishes the regulations regarding access to and disclosure of student records.

To fulfill FERPA requirements, the university has established Policies on Student Records. These policies outline a student's rights regarding his/her records, where records about the student may be kept and maintained, what kinds of information are in those records, the conditions under which the student or anyone else may have access to information in those records, and what action a student can take if it is believed that the information in his/her record is inaccurate or that the student's rights have been compromised. The policies on student records are on the web at http://www.uky.edu/registrar/FERPA-privacy

For more information or to receive a copy, contact the Office of the Registrar, 10 Funkhouser Building

Because the university does not maintain all student records in one location, each office maintaining student records is required by the University of Kentucky to develop a written statement of policies and procedures for handling those records; these statements are available for students to examine in the respective offices. In addition, copies of the university's policies on student records and the pertinent federal law, FERPA, are posted in the Office of the Registrar's locations and are also available in all Deans' offices (see school/college contact information)
