This documentary follows the Ballou Senior High School marching band as they strive to overcome their environment with music, dedication and compassion. Their school is just three miles from the U.S. Capitol building. During the filming of the documentary, 58 violent crimes occurred within 1,500 feet of the school. Several political and well known national leaders such as the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Gen Colin Powell, Congressman John Lewis and D.C. Mayor Adrian Fenty are featured in the film.
