Assistant Professor of Public Health

East Stroudsburg University invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track position with the Department of Health Studies beginning August 2015. The Department of Health Studies offers undergraduate programs in Public Health (with two tracks in Health Services Administration and Community Health Education), and School Health Education, along with a CEPH accredited MPH in Community Health Education, and a M.S. in Health Education. As part of Pennsylvania’s State System of Higher Education (PASSHE), we offer competitive salaries and a comprehensive benefits package.

Responsibilities: The successful candidate will have teaching responsibilities in the department’s public health graduate and undergraduate programs. This individual will be expected to provide leadership within the department’s public health programs including but not limited to conducting/mentoring student research, developing community partnerships, program assessment and implementing extended learning opportunities within the field. The standard workload for teaching faculty is 12 hours per semester term, with a maximum of three (different course) preparations. Teaching may include distance learning and/or off campus teaching.

Required Qualifications: Completed doctoral degree in public health or related field with a graduate degree from a CEPH accredited program; experience teaching at the graduate/undergraduate level; and demonstrated scholarly achievement in the areas of public health administration and/or health policy. Completion of the doctoral degree required by 8/15/15 is required. Finalist must successfully complete an on-campus interview, which includes a teaching demonstration, a presentation of their research to the faculty the graduate students, and a departmental interview.

Preferred Qualifications: Preference will be given to the candidate who has demonstrated achievement in the public health field, with evidence of scholarly publications, evidence of quantitative and data analytic skills, securing extramural funding in the community/public health field with the experience and leadership needed to serve as a faculty member in CEPH-accredited programs.

To Apply: Applications will begin being reviewed on November 30th, 2014. Electronic applications should be submitted through the following website:

Applicants are to attach: 1) a cover letter; 2) Resume/CV/vitae; 3) unofficial transcripts (official transcripts required before appointment); and 4) contact information for three professional references. As a part of your application materials please address your own experience working with traditionally underrepresented populations. Final determination will be based upon a successful interview, which may include a teaching demonstration. Failure to submit all the required materials may lead to the candidate not being considered. All candidates must provide proof of eligibility to work in the United States. Offers of employment are contingent upon successful completion of a background check.

East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania (ESU) is located in Northeastern Pennsylvania adjacent to the scenic Pocono Mountains and the unspoiled Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area. Founded in 1893, ESU is one of fourteen university members of the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education and has a current enrollment of over 6,900. Both the enrollment and the picturesque campus have experienced substantial growth in recent years as a result of, among other factors, the university’s reputation for academic excellence and strategic planning. Offering 58 undergraduate degree programs and graduate degrees in 23 fields of study, the university is poised for continued growth. The surrounding community offers options for suburban, small city, or country living all within a less than two hour drive to both New York City and Philadelphia.

Only online applications will be accepted. Use the following link to apply:
