The following serves as the set of expectations for students invited to participate in the College of Health Sciences Ambassador program. A student may be asked to leave the Ambassador program upon the discovery of expectations unfulfilled. It should also be noted that failure to fulfill expectations may hinder an Ambassador from reselection for future academic years.

For their service to the college, Ambassadors shall receive $175 per semester pending satisfactory completion of expectations through a point system. The semester compensation shall be applied in the form of a scholarship at the beginning of each semester of service. Failure to complete expectations shall result in no compensation for the following semester of service and may result in dismissal from the position (and therefore no compensation) for future terms.
