Backup! Backup! Backup! You have probably read or heard this many times. If you have files on your computer that you cherish, you need to back them up—the 2019 fall update from Microsoft for Windows 10 deleted files on several computers. One person had over 20,000 pictures deleted from his computer. Fortunately, he backed up his files several weeks before the update occurred. Windows 10 has a built-in app called File History. This workshop will look at how to use it to back up your data files and recover any files you have accidentally deleted and cannot recover.

CULTURE

Art in Ancient Italy: Etruscan, Roman Republic & Empire
Instructor: Michael Worley
Dates and Times: Tuesdays & Thursdays, June 8 - July 13
12 - 1 p.m.
Location: Online Zoom Course
Maximum Enrollment: 40 | Course Fee: $25

This survey course is a followup of my OLLI class in Ancient Greek Art (Spring 2019). Both are based on the class I taught at Dominican University in 2012, which covered both Greek and Roman. I propose the traditional chronological presentation, reviewing the arts under each emperor, except those who contributed nothing to the arts. The student will benefit from a knowledge of Greek and Roman art, which is essential for anyone planning to study later periods in European art history, even modern. I consider this to be as sophisticated as any undergraduate-level course.

Good Movie, Good Remake!
Instructor: Ed Reeves
Dates and Times: Wednesdays & Fridays, July 7 - 30
2 - 4:30 p.m.
Location: Online Zoom Course
Maximum Enrollment: 25 | Course Fee: $25

It is generally thought that the remake of a successful film will not measure up to the original, but this is not always true. In this course we will consider four very good films that were successfully remade. We will examine and discuss the cinematic elements that made the original movie noteworthy, and the contrasting elements that allowed the remake to stand out as well. We will learn about the backstories of how the original movie and the remake were respectively produced.
